One Night Break at The Old Cider House 4* Guesthouse – Somerset (South West) - Nether Stowey

Situated in the heart of the village of Nether Stowey at the foot of the Quantock Hills, this is the ideal location for an overnight break – whether you want peace and quiet, a base for sightseeing or a day walking in the hills. Each bedroom is individually decorated and themed; a four-poster room (the Castle Room), the Poets' Room where you are invited to contribute a poem for the wall or the Quantock Room overlooking the stream which runs by the house. In addition, guests can look around the microbrewery and maybe taste one of the brews in production.

On arrival at tea time guests are greeted with a cup of tea in front of the open fire (or in the garden if the weather permits), and then shown to their room. Evenings are relaxed in Nether Stowey with its three inns and bistro, or dinner can be taken in-house (dinner not included in price). Breakfast consists of locally sourced full English with eggs from the owners' hens or continental with home-baked breads. The village in which the Old Cider House is situated is full of history and a village trail guides visitors around the interesting historical sites.
